

From hidden Chinese restaurants to a new eatery from Trick Daddy, here's what to look for in Miami this September

by Laine Doss

Sep 3, 2025, 3:44 PM EDT

Laine Doss is an award-winning food and spirits writer with nearly two decades of experience. She is the editor of Broken Palate and the former food editor of Miami New Times.

Having trouble keeping up with all the new establishments popping up? Here are some noteworthy restaurants opening around Miami this September.

A new restaurant across from the Deering Estate

For years, Snowdon's in Palmetto Bay was known as the local Cheers for its friendly service, good food, and drink. Now, it's revitalized as the Old Cutler Inn, serving wood-fired American fusion classics such as wahoo fish dip, Korean barbecue short rib, and flatiron steak frites paired with craft cocktails.

7PM

Unique Monthly Visitors: 6,155,473/month
Link